

Animal guru shows how to mind out for panicky pets

■ By Miranda Knox

PET owners wanting to escape to the sun and avoid the dreaded January blues can now do so without having to worry about their anxious animals.

Pea Horsley, 38, an animal communicator, advises families and people concerned about their panicky pets when they go away to use telepathic communication to reassure them they have not been abandoned.

Enfield Dog Rescue pooch, Woodie a three-year-old German shepherd, responded very well to the communication technique when his new owners Richard Francis, 49, and Clara Von Horn, 47, went abroad and placed him and his cat companion Alfie in kennels.

Woodie was adopted by the couple in 2009 from the Enfield rescue centre after the mother in his adoptive family became ill, and they were unable to look after him.

Clara said: "The upheaval had understandably unsettled him and he missed his family."

"We felt it was important for them to know they were coming back to their new home and kennels were the best option. Woodie was not looking forward to it, but he understood and was okay about it."

Initially Woodie was quiet and nervous but after settling in he soon felt secure and at home, and his owners have been able to understand his thoughts and demands through Pea's communication.

Clara said: "He has plenty of girlfriends and his favourite is Wispa, a white golden retriever/German shepherd cross."

"He has a sense of humour too. He will steal cat food pouches in protest if we are both out. Ripped foil pieces will greet us on the door mat and Woodie will wear this guilty, but slightly defiant look on his face."

Pea says she can speak to a variety of animal through telepathy and exchange thoughts and feelings to reassure pets, and ultimately develop a deeper understanding of the animals needs.

She said: "Some animals are given up, especially after Christmas and they often don't understand why, and they wonder what they've done wrong."

"I can explain to the pet what's going to happen if their guardian is going away, and reassure them that they will be coming home again."

Pea can also use her communication skill to speak to missing pets that may have strayed during the New Year celebration confusion. By looking at a photo she is able to "tune" in to the distressed animal and ask them if they know where they are.

In 2008 she hit national headlines after she helped locate missing Mutt Marmalade just by looking at a photo of him, despite being more than 100 miles away from the pet.

Food for thought: Pea suggests telepathic communication

Browse
and buy our photos!

Visit

www.enfield-today.co.uk

and click on the link to the online photo
order form

For all that's best in Enfield today

www.enfield-today.co.uk

Now follow us at Twitter @
NrthLondonNews

BROWSE elsewhere on our website, which offers a new way to access the best Enfield has to offer.

Along with all the news and sport, it features a host of innovative and high-quality enhancements that will give you the chance to get even more out of your newspaper.

A brilliant motors section features in-depth videos and road tests of all types of vehicles by authoritative industry experts, and the holidays section offers some of the best bargains out there for your getaway.

And for those of you looking to promote your community event, there is no better way than the What's On section, where you can place a free advert.

So log on and see what Enfield-Today can do for you today.

